Anderman Ceramics appears alongside Prime Minister Theresa May in the 2016/17 Parliamentary Review.

Established by former minister The Rt Hon David Curry in 2010, The Parliamentary Review's September release is now a key fixture in the political calendar.

Anderman Ceramics features alongside the Prime Minister and a small number of outstanding organisations in a document that looks back on the year in industry and Westminster. The main aim of the Review is to showcase best practice as a learning tool to the public and private sector.

Across all policy areas, The Parliamentary Review is sent to over half a million leading policymakers. The articles in the Review act as both a blueprint for success and a template for reform.

The Prime Minister commented that 'this year's Parliamentary Review follows a significant year in British politics' and this is reflected in the articles from leading journalists and best-practice representatives alike.

The PM's former cabinet colleague, Sir Eric Pickles, who was recently appointed Chairman of the Review, said 'it has never been more important for government to hear the views of business and the public sector in a constructive forum. It is also a vital time to share best practice and progress.'

The Parliamentary Review's director Daniel Yossman concurred, saying 'Anderman Ceramics and other hardworking organisations from across the country have come together to make this year's Review possible.

Sharing knowledge and insight with both peers and government is essential work and I am delighted that this year's Review will reach every corner of the British economy.

It's always a real joy to hear from policymakers who tell me that something they have read in the Review has had an effect on their thinking.

It is my belief that innovation is contagious, if only it is given the platform to spread. It is the Review's purpose to provide this platform and I am confident we are fulfilling it.'

Anderman Ceramics Chairman, Dr John Verrier, said 'We at Anderman Ceramics were very pleased to participate in the Parliamentary Review 2017. Anderman offers services to customers across the Globe to help them achieve a strong supply line for industrial ceramics. By being early adopters of the internet, and understanding our customer's needs, we have grown our business year on year by 15-20%; making Anderman a worthy success story for the Review.' Two Board members, Carol Verrier and Jean Paterson attended the launch event.
