Consultants Armed with Google, ServiceNow®, RedHat & Amazon

London, 30 April 2018 – Devoteam (<http://www.devoteam.com>) (Euronext Paris: DVT) the international digital transformation consultancy, is proud to announce the EMEA roll out of its Knowledge Up Programme.

Thanks to the success of its strategic plan Scale!, Devoteam, the only true EMEA pure-player in Digital Transformation, has set an ambitious recruitment target of over 1,500 people for 2018 alone. The Knowledge Up Programme plays a key role in achieving this target, with 30% of all Devoteam recruitment reserved for high potential juniors and recent graduates entering this programme.

Successfully launched in France in 2017, expansion of the programme was the next logical step, as Devoteam COO Sébastien Chevrel explains: “Development and training are part of our DNA, and after the initial success of the Knowledge Up Programme in France, an international roll out was inevitable. By making the Knowledge Up Programme available in the UK, Belgium, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany, and the Middle East, we’re arming our consultants across EMEA with the most powerful tools on the market so they can win their Digital Battles!”

What is the Knowledge Up Programme?

The Knowledge Up Programme is a skills and career accelerator open to high-achieving participants. Over the course of three years, participants commit to undertaking training sessions linked to their professional path and centred around Devoteam’s seven core offers: Transformation Management, Agile IT Platform, Digital Workplace, Cyber Security, Data as a Service, Business Process Excellence and Customer Experience.

While gaining vital experience in the field, participants will be provided with training sessions throughout the whole three years, which aim both to complement and improve their skills. Combining leadership development with market-recognised certifications, participants are set on track to become specialists in Devoteam’s partner technologies, such as Google Cloud Platform, GSuite, Ansible, Openshift, ServiceNow®, AWS, Microsoft Azure.

This allows participants to obtain the necessary skills to become expert consultants, be it as a cloud architect, data engineer, project manager, or similar in Devoteam’s main areas of expertise.

Throughout the entire length of the programme, participants have full transparency over their career trajectory and salary evolution. Supported by a career manager, participants in the Knowledge Up Programme benefit from an accelerated and solid career path, to galvanise more their skill acquisition in parallel with their dynamic client projects.

Who Can Apply?

The Knowledge Up Programme is open to high-achieving engineering and business graduates and postgraduates, with up to three years' professional experience.

Motivated participants with a thirst for knowledge and a desire to move quickly through the ranks of an international company are invited to apply. However, applicants are advised to apply for programmes in which they already possess some basic knowledge and/or expertise.

Spotlight on the Cloud

After initial training on the fundamentals of Cloud, candidates choose their speciality: Public Cloud or Private Cloud.

On the Public Cloud track, candidates train to become certified architects on AWS, Azure or Google Cloud technology in their first and second years of the programme. In their third year, candidates can then expand their knowledge in a related field, e.g. linked to Data, or by being trained in the technology of another cloud provider.

Candidates choosing the Private Cloud Track are trained in Red Hat and may be trained and certified in a number of products, such as OpenStack, Ansible and Openshift.

"I joined Devoteam with the Knowledge Up Programme in September 2017, as it offers many opportunities to learn about and become certified in new technologies, such as Public Cloud (Microsoft Azure & Amazon AWS) and Automation with "Ansible". With the training I receive I can become a cloud expert in just three years."
