Britons In The North West Get Lucky In The Bedroom 17 Times Per Month – Lots More Than In The South

New research has discovered just how often Britons find themselves lucky: in the North West they are doing really well in the bedroom department while in the South West they are focusing on Tv and Gambling instead. In this region, they are the least lucky in the bedroom having just two love-making sessions during the average month vs the 17x love-making sessions in the North.

Whilst only half of Britons believe in luck, those in the North West find themselves getting lucky in love with their partner on average 17 times per month, closely followed by those in the South East and Northern Ireland. Unfortunately for those in the South West, twice a month is going to have to suffice and to escape this harsh reality they tend to gamble more especially at night.

The team at CasinoBiggestBonus.com (<http://CasinoBiggestBonus.com/>) conducted the research as part of an ongoing study into British attitudes towards luck. 2,823 Britons aged 18 and over, all of whom stated that they were in a committed relationship, were quizzed about how often they 'get lucky' in a variety of ways.

Initially all respondents were asked 'Do you believe in luck?' to which just over half of respondents, 51%, stated that 'yes' they do. When asked if they did anything to boost their luck, a third of those (32%) admitted that 'yes' there are things that they do, including 'abiding by superstitions' (39%) and 'carrying a good luck charm' (33%). Additionally all the respondents were asked if they get lucky at Casino and the South West came ahead in the table with 47% of the respondents in that region said that that they were.

All respondents were then asked how often they 'got lucky' with their partner, as well as being asked to state what region they lived in in order to determine regional averages. All of the responses were collated and the results were as follows:

- North West – 17x (love-making sessions per month)
- South East – 15x
- Northern Ireland – 14x
- East Midlands – 14x
- Wales – 10x
- Yorkshire and the Humberside – 9x
- West Midlands – 8x
- London – 7x
- East of England – 5x
- North East – 4x
- Scotland – 4x
- South West – 2x

According to the poll, the average love-making session was revealed as 19 minutes, with the most popular times to do so revealed as 'in the morning after waking up' (22%), 'when in bed at night, before going to sleep' (19%) and 'usually under the influence of alcohol' (15%).

Those who confessed that they typically had sexual relations with their partner only twice a week they were asked what they were doing instead at night before sleeping. 'Watching TV' (39%) and 'gambling' (18%) were cited as the most common alternatives to having sex.

John Pentin, Editor in Chief of CasinoBiggestBonus.com, commented:

"Whilst some may be jealous of others for getting lucky in the bedroom more than they do, ultimately sex isn't the be all and end all of a relationship. There are various factors that make a strong, healthy relationship – but being intimate definitely helps. It comes out quite strongly from our survey that people in the South West are looking for alternative forms of luck due to their rather low numbers in the bedroom department."
