New partners co-host webinar on Cyber Security, GDPR and Local Government on 20 September 2018

London, UK - Cyber security specialist CySure Ltd has signed up Renaissance Contingency Services as the company's first distributor in Ireland. The Dublin-based IT security and compliance experts will resell CySure's information security management system, Virtual Online Security Officer (VOSO). The agreement with Renaissance further extends Cysure's international network of partners across the Republic of Ireland, South Africa, the USA and the UK.

Michael Conway, Director at Renaissance Contingency Services said, "Every day, networks and businesses are being attacked by cyber criminals and we need to work alongside partners we can trust to guide organisations through today's complex security and compliance landscape. We selected CySure after evaluating the marketplace for a solution that would allow our partners and their customers to manage and demonstrate their compliance with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) simply and effectively. When combined with our 30-year track record in the industry, we can jointly offer the depth and strength of solutions and advice our partners need to grow their business while protecting themselves and their customers against the constant threat of cyber attacks."

CySure has been accepted onto the UK Government's G-Cloud 10 digital marketplace. As part of that process the security component of the GDPR was mapped into VOSO, providing an easy to follow, staged approach to GDPR along with all the policies and training videos necessary to complete the compliance process.

Joe Collinwood, Chief Executive Officer of CySure added, "As Ireland's premier IT security distributor and leading business continuity consultancy provider, Renaissance has an enviable reputation for delivering a robust set of solutions. According to GCHQ research 80% of cyber attacks are preventable when staff are trained regularly and the right policies are in place. VOSO is a complete information security management system which interprets government and industry standards to ensure the right steps are taken to keep data secure and organisations compliant. This new partnership will enable CySure and the IT channel to create a powerful proposition to keep Irish public sector organisations safe and secure."

On 20th September, CySure and Renaissance will co-host a 45-minute webinar entitled "Cyber Security, GDPR and Local Government".

During this interactive tutorial, attendees will learn about the main areas that make public sector organisations vulnerable to attack such as staff and contractor changes, human error and weak internal processes. They will also take away some simple, inexpensive ideas to facilitate their own path to GDPR compliance including the need for continual process monitoring; knowing when to engage external consultants to plug in knowledge and skills gaps while containing costs and a deeper understanding of executive legal responsibilities.
