Netmaster Solutions Ltd, provider of Caselines, the global leader in evidence management and courtroom presentation is pleased to announce that it has hired Jon McNerney as Chief Executive Officer.

Mr McNerney joins from Forrester Research and brings over 30 years of sales, marketing and business development experience working in organisations such as Autonomy, Kaseya, the Internet Society, Lotus Development Corporation and Talisma Corporation.

"I'm very pleased to join Netmaster Solutions, whose enthusiasm for innovation and customer focus I share. I have had successful results during my career to open and expand market share worldwide for various organisations. CaseLines is one of those solutions that brings real value to courtrooms internationally and has had significant success in a short time. There are exciting changes happening in legal technology and I am looking forward to being a part of it." says Jon McNerney.

"Jon brings solid credentials in business development coupled with an enthusiastic, inclusive and positive leadership approach. We believe we will be moving from strength to strength with Jon joining our team", Paul Sachs, Netmaster Founder and CTO said.

CaseLines now holds over 240,000 cases and is used regularly by 25,000 users, which includes 1,400 judges. Most recently the DIFC Courts in Dubai announced their intention to become completely paperless using CaseLines. CaseLines holds a central role in the courtroom and provides a perfect platform to deliver to the justice system much-needed innovations, such as streaming video evidence and on-demand virtual hearings.
