

World Cup 2010: England's World Cup Squad Betting

Submitted by: Invendium Ltd

Thursday, 20 May 2010

World Cup betting (<http://worldcup.online-betting-guide.co.uk/>) has already begun on what players will make the final 23 squad. Cappello must reduce his provisional 30 player squad down to 23 players. It appears 20 players are almost guaranteed a place on the team, that leaves three places up for grabs. Click here to get the latest World Cup Odds (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu>)

World Cup Odds (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu>) brings you the latest World Cup 2010 (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu>) news, offers and free bets. World Cup Odds have studied the stats, past performances of all 32 qualified teams and brings you the very best in World Cup advice and World Cup Tips. If you want to make some money this summer – make World Cup Odds your first stop.

Some of the players jostling to fill the three remaining places are Theo Walcott and Michael Carrick, both are odds on to make it, but neither of them had a good season, so they are in quite a precarious position. Darren Bent, Matt Dawson and Shaun Wright Philips are even less likely to make it to South Africa. The bookmakers have these players as outsiders. Click here to get the latest on England World Cup Squad Betting (<http://www.online-betting-guide.co.uk/england-world-cup-squad.htm>)

England World Cup squad betting can be quite erratic and could change completely over the next few weeks with injuries and friendlies. Michael Ballacks injury shows how easily a player can get injured and ruled out of the World Cup.

Click here to get World Cup Odds (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu>) latest tips on who to back this World Cup 2010 (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu/world-cup-tips>). Before placing your bet this summer, get help from the World Cup Betting (<http://www.worldcupodds.eu/outright-betting>) experts.

For more information contact:

Sinead Lambert

www.worldcupodds.eu

sinead@invendium.co.uk