Again for 2018, the judging panel will bestow a lifetime achievement award on an individual that the panel concludes has been instrumental in driving the evolution and successful impact of technology within the legal services sector over the course of their career long or short.

Winners of all BLTA categories (including the lifetime achievement award) will be announced at a black-tie ceremony to be held at the Plaisterers' Hall in London on 1st November 2018, which will be hosted by comedian Tim Vine.

Most tickets to this prestigious event, which will bring together dignitaries, nominees and guests in a celebration of exceptional achievement within the legal IT sector, have already been sold, with all remaining tickets available on a first-come-first-served basis.

Commenting on the BLTA shortlisting announcement, Netlaw Media's UK and EMEA Managing Director Frances Armstrong said: "Netlaw Media has worked extremely closely with the judging panel to ensure that the BLTA's continue to offer an honest and truly-focused accolade for the British legal technology sector. The awards continue to recognise and celebrate the sector's dedication, innovation and visionary leadership."

Judging panel chair Jacqueline De Rojas added: "These awards bring together the best legal, innovation and tech brains. It's an incredible opportunity to witness the relentless pace of change that tech brings and to glimpse the future of empowered access to justice."
