Nettec to Integrate Stellent Technology into Digital Content Management

LONDON, UK, May 10th 2002 — Stellent™, Inc. (Nasdaq: STEL), a global provider of enterprise content management solutions, today announced a partnership with the corporate portal specialists Nettec plc. Nettec's approach is to forge strong alliances with companies that have achieved leading market share and high levels of customer satisfaction in their respective markets. The fusion of Stellent's powerful technology and Nettec's depth of experience in deploying enterprise content management into intranet, extranet and internet applications, provides companies with a clever way of managing and converting documents, content and data for delivery to any kind of consumer or business application. By integrating Stellent's technology into corporate portal solutions for UK companies, Stellent and Nettec can offer their customers significant improvement in effectiveness and boost productivity levels.

"We look forward to a long and mutually beneficial partnership with Nettec," said Peter Silvester, Director of Alliances for Stellent EMEA. "As Stellent moves deeper into the European market, it is essential to have well-reputed partners with whom to work. Nettec has the perfect pedigree to meet this aim."

Thomas Nikolopoulos, Nettec plc Managing Director, commented, "With the ever-increasing use of content management systems as the basis of many solutions that Nettec provides, it is important for us to be aware of, and to partner with, the content management market leaders. Nettec recognises Stellent as an essential and well-respected organisation within the content management industry that fits well within our corporate portal domain of expertise.'
