Cleaning and de-cluttering are cornerstones of the spring clean. But how about making the process more creative? Can you make something new and useful rather than just having a good clear out?

Why don't you look through your china and tableware? Have you got some plates you like but you don't use as you haven't got enough for your table? Is your dinner service missing a few key pieces? Or a teapot missing a lid?

If so Jon Ward, managing director of Chinasearch (<http://chinasearch.co.uk>) has an idea:

"Creating a new dinner or tea service out of mismatched bits and pieces can make the spring clean really satisfying. It's amazing what people have in the cupboards that they don't use. They don't want to throw away china as it's beautiful and often has sentimental value. What we can do is complete any sets to make sure the tableware finds its way onto the table so you can enjoy it."

Chinasearch can make you a new dinner service or tea set, by finding the missing pieces. The company is Europe's largest supplier of discontinued china and tableware and ships worldwide.

Chinasearch has 300,000 items and 6000 patterns in stock, including Wedgwood, Royal Doulton, Villeroy & Boch and Spode. If the item you need is not in stock, Chinasearch provides a personal no-obligation search intent on finding exactly what you're looking for. When the item is found they notify you - and you only pay for the cost of the item.
